“So, what type of contract is it?” It depends. This is a question that, without further information, might leave one uncertain as to the connotation. This training session typically will cover the more frequent contract types encountered when dealing with the federal government (to include the Department of Defense, NASA, and other federal agencies.)

This presentation is intended for those dealing with the contracts, subcontracts, procurement, and program fields. It is structured to cover a brief background on government contracting, overarching statute and regulation, general circumstances surrounding the selection of various contract vehicles by the government, typical application relative to contract type, as well as the
