SBA NEW SMALL BUSINESS MENTOR/PROTEGE PROGRAM, JV CHANGES, & LIMITATIONS ON SUBCONTRACTING

In the past two and a half months, the SBA has promulgated two significant new rules impacting government contractors. The first rule overhauled the "limitation in subcontracting" rule, which generally mandates the minimum small business participation in the performance of small business set-aside contracts. The second rule created a new mentor-protégé program for participants in all of the SBA's small business programs (similar to the mentor-protégé program that has existed for participants in the 8(a) Business Development Program) and also revised the small business joint-venture rules.

This presentation will cover the most significant changes implemented by each of these new rules, including:

1. How to apply the new formulas for limitations on subcontracting,
2. The eligibility requirements for both mentors and protégés under the new program,
3. Compliance obligations for participants in the new mentor-protégé program, and
4. The major changes to the small business joint-venture rules.
